"To stop fishing with pound nets fykes, in the Chesapeake and its tributaries, within the bounds of Accomac and Northampton." beg leave through the columns of the ENTERPRISE to place a few facts in connection with the business before the people believing that but few signatures can be obtained if the matter is thoroughly understood.

1. The business is a great source of

A certain class of the men who are chagged in the bushess are almost and in many instances entirely dependent upon it for a support for themselves and their families, and another class of men have a large am uint of money invested in boats, nets and other fixtures neces sary to the business. The injury, there-fore which would result to both classes if the law was repealed can be readily seen. In this connection, it should be noted too, that the men thus employed are watermen, who could not be in inced to work on the farm, and who if deprived of this means of livelihood, would seek other homes or make a very poor living at best.

3. There has been a larger quantity of many kinds of tish in the Chesapeake bay in the last two years, than in the 25 cears preceding them, despite the dec-arations made by some that they would be destroyed if the manner of catching hem in question was to continue. It was prophesied a few years ago for intance, that herring would become exindicated above was permitted, but on the contrary the quantity caught in the value that the fishermen frequently turn them out after catching them—and the same is equally true of ether kind of fish, the herring being mentioned, because there are so many used for satisfice.

In this connection it should be noted that fish of all kinds nearly are migratory and in their passage up the coast in the spring, whether they enter the bay or not depends up or the wind and weather, so that to protect the fish it would be near ssary to prevent lishing it would be necessary to prevent lishing from Maine to the Gulf of Mexico. If there is any difference in the catch of lish with hook and line now than formerly, it is due to the fact that the steamers run some of them daily into the shailow places and necessarily fright-ened them so that they won't bite, and that being the case why not petition the Legislature to stop the steamers from running?
